

From the monastery village of Engelberg to the ice giants of the Bernese Alps

Departure Engelberg » Arrival Lauterbrunnen - Hike from Engelberg to Lauterbrunnen

3 Days | 2 nights | Difficulty PP | Max. difficulty PPP

This three-day hike takes you from the monastery village of Engelberg along two of the most beautiful pre-alpine mountain lakes to Meiringen and further over the big and small Scheidegg passes to the mountaineering Meccas of Grindelwald and Lauterbrunnen. The route is dominated by the spectacular scenery of the high summits of the Bernese Alps, with a great variety of landscapes and cultures. The Eiger-Trail, on the third day, is a spectacular variant of the original Via Alpina trail, leading to the foot of the Eiger north face, world-renowned and rich in history.

Leave Engelberg on a steep southward climb to the Gerschnialp. The mountain trail leads past the Trüebsee lake to the Joch pass. This section can also be covered using aerial cable cars. From the pass, continue down to the Engstlenalp. After a short ascent reach the Tannalp where the showcase cheese dairy, hotel and mountain lake invite to linger on. Then the trail leads on a ridge to the Balmeregghorn mountain and further to Planplatten, with a fantastic view on the Bernese Alps. From there, the descent to Meiringen can be shortened using the lifts.

The Eiger-Trail branches off from the original Via Alpina route at Alpiglen, half-way on the climb to the Kleine Scheidegg. It leads up over alpine meadows and steep scree slopes to the foot and then along the world famous Eiger north face to the Eigergletscher station. In good weather, with binoculars you may observe alpinists or climbers in one of the vertiginous routes. The descent to Lauterbrunnen first follows a glacier moraine towards Wengernalp. As an alternative one may go down from the Eigergletscher station to the Kleine Scheidegg, where hundreds of tourists amble by the hotels and the station. If you are tired, you can take the train for the long way down to Lauterbrunnen.
